Dear hiring manager,

I'm assuming you've read too many of these, so I'll give your mind a break and just talk. My name is Jack, I identify as a punk nerd. Want to know what's blasting through my headphones while I'm trying to meet deadlines at 4:00 am? Probably Blink-182 or the Offspring or something. After I finish that task, I'll hop on a drum kit or a skateboard and let out some stress. Why choose those activities to fill my time? So I can think about the problems I need to solve behind this monitor. Getting lost in thought is like 50% of my existence. Solving those problems is like a game to me. Not just the whole ~getting it to work properly~ part, but the part where other people have to read, understand, and maintain my work. That's the real challenge, and that's where I have fun: "how can I design this so nobody will cry when they try to read my code?". Fun game, right? Any-who, if you've made it this far, thank you for your time, I hope you have a great day!

Best regards,
